12. OUTCOME OF THE PROGRAMME

Students were made aware of the significances of various vaccination programmes; in very simple language they have learnt the methods of vaccine research and development. The current system for developing, testing, and regulating vaccines developed during the present time. Participants gained an insight into the various phases of vaccine developments right from developing to pre-clinical trials to large scale manufacturing process. Students were also informed of the scopes and avenues of doing further studies in biosciences especially in immunology and their job prospects in pharmaceuticals and related sectors.
